MODCLOTH MORE THAN DOUBLES DISTRIBUTION SPACE IN PITTSBURGH, IS NAMED TO 2010 INC. 500 FASTEST-GROWING COMPANIES LIST

Pittsburgh, Pa. – ModCloth, Inc., an online vintage clothing and interiors retailer, has more than doubled its warehouse/distribution space at Gateway View Plaza on West Carson Street, Pittsburgh.

The company, which leased 46,215 square feet with the option to expand at its current location in 2009, experienced tremendous growth during the past year – approximately 1,700 percent – and in response, exercised its expansion option for a total lease of 97,914 square feet at Gateway View Plaza, a Buncher Company property. Thomas McCaffrey, SIOR, a brokerage and leasing manager with Grant Street Associates, Inc., represented the company in both transactions. ModCloth’s rapid rise to success recently was recognized nationally by Inc. magazine, which placed it second on its 500 Fastest-Growing Companies list for 2010.

Earlier this year, CEO Eric Koger announced that the company would be moving its official headquarters to San Francisco with additional offices in Los Angeles but that it would maintain its Pittsburgh presence. He told The Pittsburgh Times that Pittsburgh would remain home to the company’s online staff and core functions, including distribution, customer care, technical operations and information systems.

After receiving approximately $20 million in Series B funding, Koger and the company’s leadership team believed it made sense to move the headquarters closer to its lead investor’s Palo Alto, Calif., location. However, the Pittsburgh office is supported by two executives and more than 100 employees with additional growth expected.
